- Classes
- Breastfeeding Support
- First-time Around Group

Helpful Suggestions:

- In the event that a pump is needed upon discharge from the hospital a lactation consultant will guide you in a plan for you and your baby.
- We never suggest borrowing a used personal pump. Rental pumps are closed units that are designed to be thoroughly disinfected between users.
- New personal pumps are available from the listed durable medical equipment suppliers.
- Please arrange whenever possible to register with a durable medical equipment supplier prior to delivering your baby. This will avoid last minute preparations during your hospital stay.
- Most insurance providers require that you submit a prescription from your OB or Pediatric provider and obtain your pump from a preferred supplier.
- The mother's license and insurance card can be brought in to one of the local durable medical goods suppliers by a family member to receive the pump while mother is hospitalized. We recommend that you call first to register with the supplier.

Medela pumps: For more information, visit www.medelabreastfeedingus.com

Rental breast pumps are generally not covered by insurance unless a baby remains hospitalized after the mother has been discharged. In this case, a prescription is needed to submit to insurance. Please see a lactation consultant for assistance.

BREAST PUMP SALES

Breast pumps are now covered by insurance providers due to the Affordable Care Act. However, the breast pump that your insurance provider covers in full may not be the model that you prefer.

In addition, most insurance providers require a prescription for coverage and many require that you purchase your pump from a preferred supplier.

For information on pump options and pricing, contact a local or national durable medical equipment supplier listed here – these suppliers can often assist in determining your medical insurance coverage for your pump choice.
